TEXT

The text is just a practical representation of the manuscript,¹ for which we based ourselves upon the photographic representations edited Evans,² Huws,³ and the photographs available at the website of the National Library.⁴ The page numbers from the MS have been given their own line in this editon; they are given in bold. The lines of every page are numbered, every page starting again with the number 1. Within the text, but in superscript, the line numbers according to Ifor Williams' edition have been given. Also in superscript, but between brackets, the numbering of the different stanzes is to be found, in roman style the one used by Ifor Williams,⁵ in arabic style the one devised by Jarman,⁶ followed by the one used by Jackson,⁷ recognizable by the introductory A or B; here GT indicates “Gwarchan Tutwlch,” GA “Gwarchan Adebon,” GK/GC “Gwarchan Kynvelyn,” and GM “Gwarchan Maelderw.”

The difference between the different types of s, s en ſ, has been retained, as is the case with y and j, and r and 2.

The manuscript seems to be the work of two scribes, normally indicated by the sigla A and B. Scribe A wrote 88 stanzas of the poem, and the four Gorchanau. Scribe B wrote 35 stanzas, on page 23-24 and following the Gorchanau, from page 30b onwards. The text written by hand B is highlighted in yellow.
